

As senior economist for First American Financial Corporation, a leading provider of title insurance, settlement services and risk solutions for real estate transactions, Odeta Kushi prepares analysis and commentary, and forecasts trends in the real estate and mortgage markets.

Kushi's research focuses on real estate and urban economics, and applied econometrics. She conducts research around demographic trends, millennials and homeownership. She also monitors and analyzes quarterly surveys and economic data related to the housing industry. Her research has been published in leading business and industry trade publications, such as Business Insider, HousingWire and Inman News.

Kushi graduated from Northeastern University with a master's degree in Applied Economics in 2015, specializing in microeconomics and applied econometric methods, and she earned a bachelor's degree in Economics from St. John Fisher College, in both cases earning the title of Summa Cum Laude. While originally from Albania, she now lives and works in the Washington, D.C. area.
